By Associated Press.
PUEBLO, Mex., July 18.—It was announced today that General Huerta had decided to depart from this port on the German cruiser Dresden, General Blanquet alone accompanying him. It is understood that the general will go to Jamaica, but this has not been officially announced.

None of the refugees will be accommodated on the Dresden, which has been utilized as a refuge by many of the fugitives here. Owing to their unsuccessful efforts to charter the steamer City of Mexico for the voyage, and to their unwillingness to accept the Mexican government's offer of passage on the City of Mexico, about 40 of the fugitives, mostly women, will proceed on the City of Mexico as ordinary passengers to Galveston, Tex. Cruz. It is probable that the general will be accompanied by a small staff of his followers. A message was sent late last night to the new government asking permission to use the submarine and an affirmative reply arrived this morning.

Huerta and Blanquet rose at 4 o'clock in spite of the fact that work had kept them up till after midnight. The problem of food for the refugees was not an easy one. The attack on board the sleeping cars had been exhausted and it was necessary to bring meals to the train from a restaurant in the vicinity. Neither Senora Huerta nor Senora Blanquet had any money and up to 7 o'clock this morning hot plans were then being made for an interchange of calls before their departure.

TO QUIT SAN LUIS POTOSI

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 18.—To demonstrate that the new government was not an easy one, the attack on board the sleeping cars had been exhausted and it was necessary to bring meals to the train from a restaurant in the vicinity. Neither Senora Huerta nor Senora Blanquet had any money and up to 7 o'clock this morning hot plans were then being made for an interchange of calls before their departure.

CONSTITUTIONALISTS BAR PRIESTS FROM THEIR TOWN.

By Associated Press.
CAMERO, Tex., July 18.—The Constitutionalists, who are active toward the Catholic Church in Mexico, have resulted in an unusual situation today in Nuevo Laredo, Mex., opposite here. Weddings, baptisms and even funerals for Catholics either must be held without the religious services or else these services can be obtained only after unusual difficulty. The Catholics are awaiting the outcome of an appeal to General Carranza to change this situation.

Soon after the occupation of Nuevo Laredo by the Constitutionalists under Major Soto, he ordered the occupation of the Catholic Church. The priest, Father Aguirre, was ordered to leave the church and the church was used as a barracks and kitchen has been refused permission to enter.

VILLA WANTS MEXICO TO TAKE PART IN EXPOSITION.

By Associated Press.
EL PASO, Tex., July 18.—Mexico will participate in the Panama Pacific Exposition in San Francisco next year if the influence of General Villa can accomplish that end. "I am highly in favor of my country being represented at the exposition," said General Villa today in Juarez, "and I will use all the influence at my command to see that Mexico takes part in it."

General Villa expressed himself as anxious to show the United States that the Constitutionalists appreciate the country's attitude in the recent struggle, and that he thought Mexico's participation in the exposition would be a concrete evidence of appreciation.

Guanajuato is Occupied.

PORTLAND, Ark., July 18.—Constitutionalist troops under General Alvarado occupied this town today. They received an ovation.

Strolls Fields Like September Morn; Girl From Sylvan Groves is Torn

A young woman, who gives her name as Mabel Wallace, and who is alleged to have been seen about the fields near Juniata and Hiner in a September Morn, thereby creating such a stir that the Rainey interests feared that their mining settlements might be depopulated of the male element, was arrested by Constable William Roland about 9 o'clock last night after an exciting chase through the woods. She was fully garbed when arrested. The girl, who is about 21 and good looking, is in the city lock-up waiting a hearing before Judge Graham at 10 o'clock on a charge of disorderly conduct.

The girl is claimed to have been living out in the fields near Juniata for some weeks. Her actions were not those of a perfect lady, it is said. The Rainey men finally asked Constable William Roland to place her under arrest. She led him quite a chase across the fields and when finally caught, she complained bitterly that a constable should arrest her. A constable's business is to preserve the peace, she said, not to go around interfering with an innocent girl who is living according to the dictates of her own conscience.

The girl objected strenuously to accompanying the constable to town, but he finally prevailed upon her to make the trip without disturbance.

GOVERNOR REFUSES TROOPS IN THE OHIO STRIKE ZONE

Sheriff Anderson Makes First Arrest of Agitators Since the Trouble Began Days Ago.

COLUMBUS, O., July 18.—That the situation in the strike zone of Belmont county is not such as would justify the sending of troops to that vicinity was the substance of a report made today to Governor Cox. The report was made by Major Joseph H. Anderson, who has been sent several days investigating conditions in the mines in Belmont county as a confidential agent of the governor. He avers that the situation was not menacing, but that the local authorities are capable of handling it if they make use of the proper legal resources.

Sheriff John H. Anderson of Belmont county, who was unofficially requested yesterday by Governor Cox for not making more vigorous effort to stop rioting among coal miners near Belvoir, today made his first arrest since the trouble began a week ago, according to reports received at the governor's office. The sheriff took charge of five industrial workers of the world who were attacking caretakers and engineers of a mine near Stewartsville and lodged them in jail at St. Clairsville.

Russia Proposes to Abolish Expensive
Passport Requirement.
By Associated Press.
ST. PETERSBURG, Russia, July 18.—Russia is about to recognize an international convention to permit the free passage of citizens of other than these in Europe, and the ministry of commerce today submitted to the cabinet a bill to abolish some of the passport restrictions which the Russian government has been imposing on unauthorized immigration.

The bill in its present form refers to the 251,000 emigrants from Russia to America last year and also to the fact that $50,000,000 was remitted to Russia in 1913 by Russian subjects who have settled on the other side of the Atlantic.

In place of the expensive passports which hitherto have been necessary for emigrants to depart from Russia, permits will be issued at the cost of only 10 cents in the future.

The first accident from the carload between 9 and 10 o'clock on First street, West Side, when Mike Johnson, 14, was shot in the eye. He charged John Agby, aged 16, as the offender. The wound was dressed by Dr. C. W. Utz, but is not considered serious.

Information was made before Alderman Eugene O'Donoghue of the West Side and the case was tried this morning. There was lack of evidence on both sides. The defendant's mother said that her son had not been playing with a gun, but the bullet had glanced from a board fence and struck him after the fence had been spent.

The defendant was willing to pay the costs of the case, the doctor's bill and give the boy $2 for the time he was not able to go to school. The elder DePaul did not agree to this as he wanted $25 damages.

Mother of Jake Taylor Seeks Aid
To Show That Youth is Demented

In an effort to collect evidence that may help clear her son of the murder charge now pending against him in the Allegheny county court, Mrs. Taylor of Hopwood, mother of Jake Taylor, the youth accused of murdering little Florence Hove at Braddock, the latter part of May, spent yesterday in town interviewing persons who knew Jake as a child and who could throw light on the character of his insanity.

Mrs. Taylor was accompanied by her daughter and they managed to scrape together a little money while in this section by selling bunches of rhododendron for a nickel each.

The accused boy has been deranged since birth. He peddled herbs and greens throughout the entire section and came to be generally known as "Sassaparilla Jake."

Six Grandsons to be Pall Bearers at the Funeral on Monday Morning; Tribute is Paid to Memory of the Pioneer of the Fire Brick Industry.

Virtually all of the stores and business houses of town will close their doors for an hour and suspend business between 9 and 10 o'clock on Monday morning as a tribute to the memory of Joseph Soisson, the pioneer brick manufacturer of the Connellsville coke region and one of Connellsville's leading financiers, who died yesterday.

The suggestion was made today by Mayor Rockefeller Marietta that such a stop be taken by the business men and it met with a hearty response. There was no time for a formal poll, but those who were approached unhesitatingly signified their willingness to act upon the suggestion.

The banks, at a meeting today, also decided that they would close during the hour of the funeral. Mr. Soisson was president of the Young Trust Company and a director of both that concern and the First and Citizens National Banks.

Hundreds of persons in every walk of life yesterday visited the Soisson home on West Main street to offer condolences to the family. Beautiful floral pieces began to arrive and continued throughout the day. Details for the funeral are being arranged.

The services will be held at the Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic church, where regular high mass will be celebrated at 9 o'clock. Brief services will be held at the home at 8:30.

Charged with conspiracy, growing out of an alleged attempt to collect twelve on a note for $5,000, Francis Rocks and David Stewart were held in $2,000 bail each for court by Alderman Fred Munk yesterday on oath of H. M. Kephart.

The information states that Kephart originally endorsed a note for Rocks in the sum of $5,000 and later endorsed a second note which was supposed to cancel the first. The defendants are alleged to have tried to collect on both notes, one of which came into the hands of S. S. Graham. The Graham estate today entered suit to collect $5,000 from Kephart on one of the notes.

Textile Workers Locked Out.

Thirty thousand textile workers in the district of Port, Prussia, were locked out today by their employers as a result of a strike of 125 fullers.

U. S. URGES STEPS TO WIPE OUT THE DREAD ARMY WORM

Department of Agriculture Responds to Appeal for Advice.

RAVAGES ARE OF WIDE EXTENT

This Section Infested, But Slaves Loss With Entire Northeastern Section of the Country; Larvae Dying as Pests Destroy the Grass in Groves.

The entire north-east of the Rocky Mountain, appears to be suffering from the ravages of the army worm, which has invaded this particular locality in swarms. The Department of Agriculture at Washington today issued a special bulletin on the subject.

Great loss has been suffered here by owners of lawns, truck gardens and farms. Within the past two or three days the army worm has appeared in such numbers as to overrun this entire section. Generally a lawn has been invaded in the patches of dead, brown grass being made evidence of the havoc that has been wrought. Many persons are resorting to the remedies suggested by the state entomologist in an effort to eradicate the pest, but the army worms have multiplied to such an extent that great loss is certain to result. Although the worms have apparently been active for some weeks past, only in the last few days have they appeared in such droves. According to the Department of Agriculture, they ordinarily feed at night, until they multiply in such numbers that they are forced to forage in the daytime.

The army worms are in the striped caterpillar about an inch and a quarter long and a quarter of an inch in diameter. It is rather dark in appearance. The moth from which this worm hatches is brown with a white spot on the center of each fore wing. It measures about an inch and one-half from wing to wing.

If the worms have not yet attacked a field the most practical way to keep them out is to plow furrows in front of them, throwing the furrow in the direction toward which they are traveling. The worms will fall into the furrow and when it is full they may be killed either by dragging a log back and forth in the furrow or by destroying the worms in holes previously dug at intervals of 20 feet in the bottom of the furrow. Repeated pouring of them in the holes will destroy them.

If the worms are already in the field the following mixture which will attract the worms and destroy them should be spread about: One pound of paris green (poisonous), 50 pounds of about bran, juice of one-half dozen oranges. Stir this mixture to a stiff dough by the use of dilute molasses. A scatterer is used to scatter the mixture. Care should be taken to keep this mixture from children or domestic animals. Prompt action to prevent the worms from invading a field is much better than later efforts to attempt to kill them in the grain. Once the caterpillars have infested a field, the measures necessary to destroy them may seriously hurt or even destroy the crop.

Clean cultivation, rotation of crops, cleaning up the fence corners, close pasturing and the burning over of waste grass land in the spring and fall, are sound measures to prevent a recurrence of the army worm.

For small areas like lawns and private grounds, the poison bait mentioned above may be used. Equally effective is the application of a mixture of one pound arsenic of lead dissolved in 25 gallons of water. If the powdered arsenic of lead is more easily obtainable, one pound of this may be mixed with 4 pounds of flour and sifted on the grass where the worms are feeding. It must be remembered that arsenic of lead is deadly poison to men and animals, as well as to army worms.

GREENE COUNTY COAL MEN INCORPORATE HOLDING COMPANY

J. V. Thompson and Associates Bunch Aerogno
Into One Tract.

87 TRACTS ARE INCLUDED

Total of More Than 8,000 Acres Is Taken Over by the Greene County
Coal Company. Remainder of Sale to the Interests is Normally Denied.

There has been considerable comment on a large transaction in Greene county coal which took place recently in giving the transfer of 87 different tracts aggregating over 8,000 acres to the J. V. Thompson and Associates. The deal is signed by over 20 people and the consideration is the nominal one of one dollar and other valuable considerations. The purchaser is the Greene County Coal Company. The coal at present prices is valued at over $2,000,000.

A number of rumors were current as to the identity of the purchaser and it was variously held to be a subsidiary corporation to large steel interests, but as a matter of fact it is merely an incorporation of the holders of the coal for more convenient handling of their securities. The tracts, were held under numerous purchases by J. V. Thompson and Associates, the consideration being for the most part, smaller interests. It was deemed best to bunch these holdings in one large tract and incorporate the holders in a company giving each stockholder shares representing his available interest in the acreage. This has been a common plan with holders of large coal tracts in other sections notably in West Virginia. It changes a really holding into personal property and makes an asset more liquid in character and more readily disposed of by smaller holders. At the same time it keeps the larger tract intact for sale to large interests which demand large acreages of contiguous coal when they come into the market.

The tract of the Greene County Coal Company adjoins on the west the 10,000 acre tract sold to Henry C. Frick in the early spring at a price not given out, but supposed to be upwards of $400 per acre that being the price at which these lands have been held. The coal has been drilled and tested in these tracts and is known to be the best Lower Connellsville coking coal.

The Greene county coal field has been pretty liberally sold up to big steel interests and coke manufacturers. W. H. Donner, President of the Cambria Steel Company, bought 762 acres in Monongahela township in February last. J. V. Thompson was the seller. The price paid was approximately $400,000. Wallace H. Rowe, President of the Pittsburgh Steel Company is the holder of a big tract The Yonietown Sheet & Tube Company, John H. Kennedy, W. H. Brown, Crucible Steel Company and others are owners and operators in this field. Operations are thus far few, but with the next upward leap in the steel business it is expected that there will be a grand industrial opening in Greene county.

UNFILLED ORDERS

Steel Corporation Reports First Increase of Year.

The Steel Corporation has reported an increase in unfilled orders on hand for the month of June of 44,507 tons, the first since last February. This is not much of a gain, but it compares with an average decrease of 850,000 tons each in the three preceding months, and therefore is looked upon as marking a turn for the better in the steel trade. The total amount of unfilled orders of the books of the corporation at the present time is a little more than 4,000,000 tons, which is larger than at any time from July, 1910, to October, 1911. The complaint is not so much over the tonnage on hand as the prices being realized and the lack of urgency in presenting specifications of greater interest than the tonnage report will be the quarterly statement to be issued on the 24th inst., covering results of operations for the second quarter and the half year. From present indications the earnings will again fall below the full dividend requirements on the common stock and the policy of the directors concerning the maintenance of the 1 1/2 per cent will probably be influenced more by the trade outlook for the present quarter than by the poor earnings for the past three quarters.

THE RAILROADS.

Banker Henry Clegg, once a favorite Democratic authority on the condition of the country, is still optimistic and to that extent Democratic, but his observations on the railroad situation and particularly his comments on the Interstate Commerce Commission are reactionary and rebellious. Hear him.

"The market has been contending for weeks against most discouraging conditions and with better success than might have been expected. The drastic report of the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding New Haven affairs was a fresh blow to confidence in the financial district. Coupled with the rumors that the Commission will next undertake the examination of the Vanderbilt lines and the Rock Island, the impression was created that the Commission is becoming a highly inquisitorial body with pronounced anti-railroad proclivities. Originally the Commission was intended to be of a judicial rather than prosecuting character. Its actions and policies of late, however, have created widespread distrust, and there is in consequence much concern about the forthcoming rate decision. Once more it should be remembered that the railroads have been obliged to pay much higher prices for all the equipment and plant which they require, and that they have made very liberal concessions to labor in the form of higher wages, but have not been allowed to group themselves in any degree for these increases in expenses by higher rates. At the same time the roads have been obliged to endure a somewhat serious decline in traffic. Severe economies have been introduced, but these cannot be expected to continue indefinitely, because rate and rolling stock are becoming out and must eventually be replenished. It seems, therefore, the height of economic injustice to refuse to railroads the right to do what every other business interest is forced to do, which is to compensate itself for unavoidable increases in expenses by increasing its charges for service. A refusal to recognize this principle would mean serious consequences, and if the roads and the service to the public of American railroads are impaired in the early future, the responsibility should be placed upon those directly responsible. The Interstate Commerce Commission has shown good service in exposing some of the glaring evils in railroad management, but the time has come for reconstructive work, and the display of a judicial attitude rather than that of a prosecuting prosecutor. Missouri Pacific officials have also occupied much attention and added to the general lack of confidence. Rumors as to the financial condition of some of the weaker roads further tended to depress the general market. The Chicago failure seems to have disappeared as a disturbing effect, and the present outlook is that other serious consequences in that quarter will be averted.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is undoubtedly confronted with a complicated and seemingly endless task in its efforts to make railroad rates equitable, chiefly because of the fact that such rates were not originally based upon equity but upon opportunity, not upon right but upon might. Much progress has been made, but in the making the Commission has thrown itself upon the mercy of home legislation and antagonists to its treatment of the railroads. If this spirit prevails in the Commission, it is time for the members to compare with themselves. The railroads are a large part of the nation's commercial life, and while they doubtless need regulation the country can not afford to see them crippled for or starved to death in the operation.

REPUBLICAN ENDORSEMENT.

The Bull Moose organ of Fayette county, with a keenness of vision not expected by the mighty hunter of Pike county, declares that Senator Clegg failed to secure an endorsement of Fayette from the Republican County Committee at its recent meeting.

We regret to note that the spirit of the Bull Moose organ is somewhat deceitful in this matter. The idea is held out that Clegg was endorsed by Fayette when as a matter of fact there were no formal resolutions and no official endorsement of any candidate. Senator Clegg in the same sense failed to get himself endorsed by Fayette.

But the Bull Moose organ is cheerfully informed that no such endorsement was necessary. The sentiment of the meeting was overwhelming and enthusiastic for the Republican ticket, which included all Republican nominees from Senator Fennore down to the county level. The popular protest against the rate increase will be full and complete.

Pres. and Wilson is desperate and determined.

The coke business may be dull, but the prosperity that knows no politics keeps from over, well kept garden at the mine, coke plants of the brick company.

POLITICAL HISTORY.

The versatile editor of the Uniontown New Freedom is not exactly a strolling player, but he is assaying many parts in the political drama of 1914. He has appointed himself the Moses of the Fayette county Democrats, and every now and then he tells us that he is going to write a history of Republican factional politics during his brief connection with them. He says boldly he prints an interesting paper and insinuates darkly that his political revolutions will be startling in the extreme.

The Republican leaders and the Republican voters are beating up quite cheerfully under those terrible threats, and they have strong hopes of surviving the awful shock of exposure. The facts are pretty thoroughly discredited and pretty thoroughly forgotten.

In writing his history, however, Editor O'Donnell might make note of the interesting fact that however bitter the factional fighting was at the primary, the Republicans lined up for the ticket at the election. If they fought like cats and dogs, they did their fighting at home, and never left the Republican household to wander among wild animals of worse sort.

It was not until 1912 that the Republican party of Fayette county was divided, and Editor Alfred Foster reports the situation correctly when he said in the Republican county meeting, "Boys, they're coming back."

What he meant was that the rank and file of the party, the men whose names are on party tickets or defeat at the polls, were coming back to vote the Republican ticket again.

We would respectfully suggest that the historians write upon present as well as past politics. It might tell of factional quarrels in their making and in their mending, and of Republicans who went away and of Republicans who came back. Thus would his story be more finished.

Life is probably not sufficiently experienced yet to write a Democratic chapter, but if he is ambitious in that line he might get Downey to help.

PROFESSOR AND PUPILS.

The Saturday Evening Post, the weekly publication that goes to a million homes more or less where it is read for the fun of its fiction rather than the solidity of its editorial deliverances, joins in the common protest against Congress remaining longer in Washington to halt the business of the nation with fettering regulations. The Post says the anti-trust measures are crude and ill-advised and that they create a bad business climate. They should be laid upon the table and Congress should adjourn.

The Post seems to place all the responsibility on Congress, whereas the best information is that it is the President who is keeping Congress in session. It is the President who is insisting that the anti-trust bills be passed. It is safe to say that if the professor would excuse the pupils they would gladly take a vacation.

The Post has been a strong supporter of President Wilson. Perhaps it had better speak to the President and give the Congress a rest.

Uniontown is borrowing some more of our money. Young Men's river water and the Uniontown Standard has the nerve to tell the citizens to bolt it. Conneltsville doesn't bolt it, and this city is one of the healthiest communities in Western Pennsylvania.

Our columns record a substantial boom in the sheriff's office just now, but perhaps the Democratic organs had not noticed this.

McKeesport passed an ordinance to keep the trains to run not to exceed eight miles per hour through the city. It takes one of the long freight trains nearly half an hour to pass a given street crossing, and this does not suit many McKeesport, either. Some progress which seems to be forward proves in practice to be backward. The New Freedom is another striking example.

Dawson has entered his application for the Fayette county seat next year. The indications are that Dawson will get it.

Aviators are flying higher and stronger.

The reduction of the high cost of living is another Democratic pledge wholly unneeded.

"There is no question about the ability of the editor of The New Standard to get out an interesting and up-to-date issue of the Uniontown New Standard. The New Freedom is evidently free from the embarrassments of modesty.

The army worm is making some record marches.

Persons engaged in duties of necessity and humanity have no right to strike. They must rely on public protest and public opinion.

Virginia railroad officials were hurt in a collision, but they were in an automobile not on the railroad. Had they been on the railroad they would have been reasonably safe.

ROAD WORK PROGRESSES.

Two-thirds of the County Contracts Are Now Complete.

Two-thirds of the seventeen miles of road being built by the county through eight townships and two boroughs has been completed. The county is expending $250,000 for the construction of these roads which include some that the commissioners promised two years ago to build.

About three hundred men are employed in constructing the roads and County Engineer Davis, who is overseeing the work, says that all the last work is under way and some of the early contracts given out are nearly completed.

THE GRIZZLY BEAR.

By GEORGE FITCH,
Author of "At Good Old Slawsh."

The grizzly bear is the most bear that is contained in a single hide. He lives in the Rocky Mountains and in the vicinity, and until his high power rifle was invented was not bothered much by his neighbors.

The grizzly is sometimes 10 feet long from the tip of his nose to the end of

"When some foolish enemy mistakes his power for cowardice he becomes a cynic, an eruption, a catastrophe and a destroying boom, all at once."

his very brief and economical tail and when he stands up on his hind legs and prepares to embrace a friend or foe he looks as tall as a lighthouse. A large grizzly weighs almost a thousand pounds, but he does not have to roll over on a personal enemy in order to kill him as an automobile does. He can bite through a gun barrel with his teeth and can scratch furs with a battleship's sides with his claws. Nothing is more discouraging than to meet a grizzly grizzly and to have to attempt to reason with him while being hugged into a small bundle of misery remains.

The grizzly is amply equipped to take care of his own affairs and his greatest virtue is the fact that he always betrays an earnest desire to do this. He does not attempt to interfere with the plans of the passerby so long as he is left alone. The grizzly is a whole peace commission by himself. He spends a placid vegetative life, digging up roots, eating berries and occasionally attacking a mouse or a ground squirrel for dessert and whenever a man appears on the horizon he retreats to some secluded spot. However, when some foolish enemy mistakes his peacefulness for cowardice and attempts to exterminate him the grizzly becomes a cynic, an eruption, a catastrophe, a Mexican revolution and a destroying boom, all at once. Only those who are extremely good shots and who have plenty of ammunition and a large tree in the immediate background should attempt to show up the grizzly's cowardice.

The grizzly on account of his great willingness to defend himself it let severely alone by all animals and most men and should be very instructive object lesson to those earnest advocates of peace who declare the United States should set an example to the rest of the world by throwing its guns in the ocean and arming itself with a Chautauqua salute.

The National Advertiser.

This is a Stop-Look-Listen editorial. July is the month when you and your agents are at work on your fall campaign.

You are making up your appropriations. Have you listed the newspapers in towns where you have distribution?

Have you planned the big punch that will move your goods and gain the support of the dealers?

Distributors are inclined to favor the manufacturers who use the papers in their home towns. They see and feel the effects of such advertising.

If you want any information about newspapers address the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, World Building, New York.

SCOTSDALE

Special to The Courier.

SCOTSDALE, July 18.—The audience listened spellbound to Congressman Walter L. Chandler's lecture on "The Trial of Jesus From a Lawyer's Standpoint," given Friday afternoon. In thought and delivery it was considered one of the greatest lectures ever heard here. The Schumann Ladies' Quartet, and Tabor, the musician, drew a big crowd in the evening.

JOSEPH P. HUGHES, who died at New Salem on Friday, aged 45 years. He leaves three sons, Clark Hugh of Scottdale; Clyde W. Hugh of Youngstown, O.; and C. D. Hugh of New Salem. Funeral services will be at Hoffman cemetery on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

FIRE ALARM.

An alarm of fire about 9 o'clock Friday evening was caused by a small fire in the basement of the high school building, where painting has been begun. It is thought that some painter had left matches in paint soaked overalls and that the fire started from this. The fourth ward hose company came in by automobile and put out the fire. The damage is very small.

FEDERALS TO PLAY SCOTSDALE. The Pittsburgh Federal League team will play at Ellsworth Park, Scottdale, Tuesday, July 21. Game called at 4:30 P. M. Admission 50 cents.—Adv.

ON CAMPAIGN.

Albert B. Taylor and Jacob Kosner, Scottdale's two mill men evangelists, leave today for Sugartown, where they will conduct a few weeks of special evangelistic meetings in the Methodist Church of that place. Mr. Taylor who was with the Hamilton party during the year just closed is the speaking and Mr. Kosner will have the music in charge.

CHILDREN'S LIBRARIAN.

Miss Evelyn Hess, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Hess, is here from New York spending a well earned vacation of a month. Since last September Miss Hess has been engaged in public librarian work in New York, in branches of the Junior, Children and Lenox Foundations, which has libraries all over the city. Miss Hess is working on the East Side and having charge of the children's libraries, whose patrons are almost all little Jewish children. Miss Hess is greatly interested in her work and talks most entertainingly of the eagerness of the children to read, of their instinctive love for the best and their unyielding interest in the books, which gives an inspiration and a delight to the librarian. In the room Miss Hess works in she says that there are given out ten times as many books a day as are given out in the Scottdale library, showing the large district which finds its entertainment and instruction in the public library of the city.

A COMING PICNIC.

The Jacobs Creek and Morgan Sunday schools are combining in a picnic which they will hold in the Keltor Grove, near Ellsworth Park, on Saturday, July 25.

LUTHERAN OUTING.

The Sunday school of the Lutheran Church, Rev. F. E. Stough, pastor, are planning to have their annual picnic at the Lehighy farm, northwest of town, on Thursday, July 23. The outing will be held in the orchard. E. O. Steiner is superintendent of the Sunday school, and D. B. Blineman is chairman of the committee on general arrangements and Walter Haines of the amusement committee.

Miss Winifred Coffey, Elizabeth Coffey, Zella Collins, Ethel Earl, Sarah McVey and Annie O'Brien, and John Coffey, James Clarkson, Edward Campbell, H. C. Crossman and William Webb were among Scottdale young people on the excursion to Ohio.

Mr. Jerome M. Kobacker,

Care H. Kobacker &amp; Sons,

Connellsville, Pa.

Dear Jerome:

Your letter of the 14th at hand. In reply to same beg to say it would be simply impossible for us to send you samples of goods in all our different departments. We have many short lengths, bargains and specials in all our departments, including Hosiery, Underwear, Ribbons, Notions, and all kinds of Dry Goods.

We have had more customers the last few days than I could properly handle; therefore you see there is no time for cutting swatches.

I would advise you to take the first train and come to New York. We are selling many Domestic lines than we can purchase them at present. The bargains and specials would be a good investment for you.

I am more than surprised that there has not been several of the Merchants from your town here.

I would like to accommodate you with samples if it were possible. I could send you a few quotations, but by the time you received same the goods might not be in stock. However, it would be much to your advantage to get here as quickly as possible. We have shipped at least 50 cases to one firm in Pittsburgh by Adams Express, which will give you an idea of what we are doing.

Hoping to have the pleasure of meeting you here in store, I remain,

Yours truly,

FRANK McCLOSKEY.

In response Mr. Jerome Kobacker and Dave Silverman, and E. L. Weiss are now East, and a telegram has been received that we have secured goods for almost every department from the $35,000,000 Receiver Sale of the wholesale house of the H. B. Claflin Co., of New York.

Rectangular Oven Has Forced the Development of New Type of Door

An interesting discussion of oven doors is to be found in the current issue of Coal Age. The author part of the edition being devoted to matters pertaining to the coke industry. Door problems as related by the general adoption of the rectangular oven is considered at length in the article, which says in part:

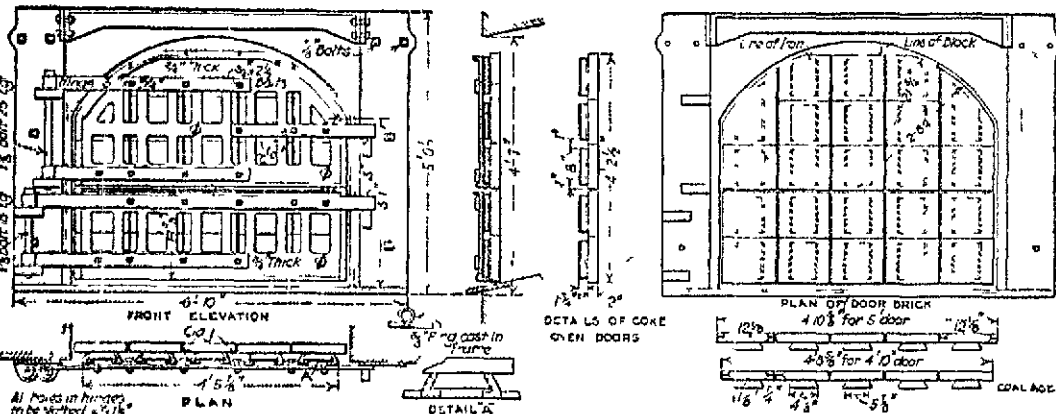

The square of the beehive oven door measured about 2 feet 9 inches by 2 feet 9 inches. Above this square was a low arch with a spring of 9 inches. Thus roughly about 9 square feet had to be bricked up of muddled every time a charge was cooked at suitable periods during the progress of burning.

The introduction of the Mit shell or Belgian ovens in which there are two doors and each of these is merely one end of the oven and has dimensions equal to those of the oven cross section made the cost of building doors an item of much interest. The Mitchell oven was adopted by those people who were looking for decreased cost of production and they naturally viewed the two large doors with great deference.

For instance the door openings at the Acme No. 2 plant of the Pittsburg Westmoreland Coal Company, Connelville, Pa. are about 10 inches by 5 feet wide and at the top of the arch are 4 feet 7 inches high. Thus 42 square feet of opening approximately has to be filled and it is with each re-charging. It has been estimated that the cost of this work including the mixing of the clay and coke breeze for making the door and light would be about 60¢ per oven. However whatever may be the cost the filling up of the doors of a Mitchell oven with brick would be 16 times as expensive as the closing of the single opening in an oven of the beehive type.

MAX-LEAVE DOOR, GENTRY END OF OVEN

To save this expense doors were introduced but they were found most expensive to keep in repair. They were barely put in commission before they had to be renewed. Now, however, there are several designs effective, simple. The difficulties to be met were four—to dislodge a door which would stand the heat one which would not be too heavy to handle, one which would not crack itself by its own weight and one with such favorable conditions for expansion and contraction that heating and cooling would be without evil effect.

The doors of the ovens at Connelville are an example of an improved successful door so that it is a new work does not come in contact with the fire but is protected by a layer of firebrick which is kept in place by being mottled integrally with a wedge shaped back which fits into the door frame. The whole face of the door between the iron work is a unit plastered with clay and this prevents air from passing through the door between the wedge fitted firebrick. The iron in the door castings is specified as No. 1 Bessemer or Cherry Valley foundry iron.

These doors have been in use about three years and they are given complete satisfaction. They are made in two parts. The lower half reaches to the level of the top of the charge and is closed before the coal is run into the oven. The upper half is swung too and is closed before the oven gets hot and all the cracks are carefully mottled so that the oven is effectively closed as if welded in a part of the door is hinged on one side and has a latch which is secured and in the lower half it is hinged by which the door may be swung open. Two rollers each hold 100 lbs. per day.

At the Denbo mine at Rellau a door is used which can be swung from a track bracketed to the row of ovens doors. This track projects somewhat therefore beyond the front of the oven wall. The suspension is by means of a hook attached to a small trolley which runs on a track from the side of a bar and can be pushed into a hole at the top of the door and secured in place by passing the end of the bar into a catch on the lower part of the frame of the upper half of the door. The lower half of the door can be attached to the upper half so that both can be swung from the track above, as has been described. The doors are not too heavy and are sometimes pushed out when the trolley being at work a large pile of coal runs forward onto the door. The oven door being on a slight batter the weight of the door is on the joints and keeps the door in place. These doors have been in use at Denbo for a year but so far they are giving perfect satisfaction.

side are here replaced by posts which are intended to sustain an 80 pound T-bar. On this rail the forward end of the crane for handling the coke travels.

The whole arrangement on both sides was installed three years ago and has given satisfaction. The doors on the pusher side and the upper segment on the crane side have needed few replacements and none of the doors on the crane side have had to be renewed. The doors fit snugly at the bottom and at the line (common to both sections). The only extended mudding to be done is at the sides and top.

J. R. Campbell, chief chemist of the If C. Pickle Coke Company has invented and patented an asbestos dahl-matting material for coke ovens and the Taylor Coal & Coke Company has at most one hundred of them in service some of which have been in operation since August. They are used with doors of the McMurray type. There are 12 doors at Lament No. 2 of that type and they are dahl-matted with the asbestos-fireclay mixture.

It may be stated for those who do not know this type of door that it consists of a cast-iron plate with finger projections on which the asbestos-clay mixture is dahl-matted. It was invented by William McMurray superintendent of the Mount Pleasant Coke Company.

The material used is described as a special mixture of flue-dry and asbestos shipped out in the plastic state ready to be applied to the door. It must be well tamped into place and if possible the door should be closed to dry out before being placed in service. However that is not essential. A green door may be used without any harm being done. About 200 pounds is needed for an ordinary door. Five ovens may be covered. It is thought that one application with a few occasional repairs will last two or three years though of course this will have to be ascertained in practice. So far the best service has been for one year at the South plant.

ORDERS 60 LOCOMOTIVES

Wabash Receives Buy, Some Will Be Built in Pittsburgh

The Wabash Railroad Company according to reports in steel circles has closed its order for 60 new locomotives for service. The inquiry for which has been in the hands of locomotive builders for some months. The order is placed by the receivers of the railroad with the American Locomotive Company, and it is considered likely that a good portion of the order will be supplied from the Pittsburgh shops of the locomotive company on the North Side.

Points for Mothers

Carrage Pillows.

The baby which is taken out for a daily airing in its carriage needs several slips for the carriage pillow. A covering that is dainty enough for any baby can be made from two handkerchiefs and a few yards of valencienne lace. If one is skilled in embroidery the word "Baby" may be embroidered on one section of the pillow.

One handkerchief should be cut in two to form the end of the pillow and the remaining handkerchief should be used for the center section. Measure the sides of the handkerchief in order to find out just how many yards of lace will be needed. The edge can be finished with lace.

Baby pillows should always have the center of the pillow plain so when selecting them choose a design with a border or corners to be embroidered. Pad the petals and leaves with cotton of a medium weight. When embroidering the design use the satin stitch, French knots and outlining stitch.

Punch work is effective and can be used to its best advantage on dainty articles for baby. Purchase a pillow filled with down and cover it with a layer of linen or china silk. The slip cover is made by attaching the ruffle to the top and then stitching the bottom in position.

The handkerchief ruffle is easily made and is particularly effective and a simple edging of valencienne lace is also a good finish. The most attractive method of joining the ruffle to the pillow is to finish it with a narrow heading.

Gardening for Children.

If you have but a small city yard give your child a foot or two for his very own garden. Let him dig it up, prepare it, plant the seeds or purchase plants out of his own spending money. If he is interested in the garden it will be his special delight to keep it weeded and in good condition, allowing him to pick his own flowers and do with them what he will. The garden will be not only a pleasure, but a benefit.

One little boy who was allowed his little patch when asked what he wanted to plant in this wee garden, replied, "Flowers because they have such sweet little faces." He was allowed to buy half a dozen plants and his greatest delight was to pick these flowers and tell them to his mother each morning. Of course the stems were short but she floated them in a glass tumbler bowl.

His garden was always in beautiful condition. One of his first duties in the morning was to rake up the ground and the little watering can was put to use at least twice a day.

Insects in the Ear.

Should an insect get into the ear of a child or an adult immediately pour in a little olive oil slightly warmed. This at once suffocates the insect, and it can then be extracted by some one who knows how. The buzzing of the insect is the loudest sound that can be heard and it will not be endured if there is any kind of grease to be had. Volstead lard will answer or even butter, although the latter having salt in it is not so good.

Hot water will sometimes wash out an insect, but the greatest cure should be taken to have it buried hot enough to feel pleasant. The idea is to drown the buzzing intruder as quickly as possible, but the delicate inner membrane should not be burned in the process.

Simple Jewelry.

Only the simplest of jewelry should be worn by the tiny girl. She may have an enamel locket swinging from a slender gold or silver chain or a platinum pendant on a platinum chain. She may wear a set of but each pin in striped enamel or platinum surrounded with seed pearls, but she should not wear rings on her fingers, not bracelets. No sort of ornament should be worn on her hair bows. Boys do not wear jewelry while in the short trousers stage.

A Rainy Day Closet.

It is a good idea for the mother of a family of children to have a rainy day closet. Into this closet she can put all manner of odds and ends of interest to children. On rainy days they may be taken out for the amusement of the little ones.

A terrific assignment of the "get-rich-quick" idea that has become almost a national calamity. How a happy home was transformed by a pretty woman's natural longing for costly apparel and luxurious living.

CHAPTER I.

Paradise on Easy Terms. Young Mrs. Reynolds sat on the steps of her new bungalow, a home of her own with all the conveniences of a city apartment—gas, hot and cold water, modern plumbing. Only fifty minutes from Herald square, yet removed from the strife and turmoil of the crowded metropolis. A place to rear children where they could romp and play. Close to schools and churches. Excellent markets. Half an acre of ground to raise her own vegetables and chickens. A fine view of the bay and plenty of good air. A spot to live as God meant her to live. Only five hundred dollars down and the rest the same as rent!

Glorious surroundings of suburban life; vivid picture from the landscape's brush. The painter struggles to express on canvas the subtle power of nature, with what facile flow of verbal coloring does this other artist reveal its charm!

Jane wanted a home and so did Bob, her husband, and with their limited means, that meant a home in the suburbs. At the first inspection of this modern Elysium the agent persuaded Reynolds to invest. What better could they do, he argued. The pretty little house, new and clean, and so easy to care for. And the landscape, that alone was worth the price. Think of the saving a garden would mean and what a joy those new-fangled eggs! Jane, somehow, was not noticeably enthusiastic, but Bob was and she acquiesced. The task of moving had fallen to her, for her husband's duties kept him at the office even on such a momentous occasion as this.

"Oh, if the water would only come," she sighed. "What in the world can have happened? It is four o'clock and they promised to have them here by noon."

Down the road, the office that the Tropic Land company's map dignified as Sunset street, there appeared a vision of hope. A solid, swarthy, red-faced, blue-aproned vision.

"There's one of the movers now," exclaimed the young wife. She advanced to meet him.

"Goodness, what makes you so late? Mr. Green said you'd be here by twelve o'clock. How will we ever get moved in tonight?"

"That's what's bothering me, madam. The trucks are down at the entrance to this paradise and Rockefeller himself doesn't own enough gasolene to get them up through the sand."

The boss said they were finished streets. They're finished the way they were when this island was discovered, but that's all. We've been trying for hours, putting blocks in front of the wheels, but it's no go. I've got to get teams from somewhere. That'll be extra. That's why I came up to see you. Is it all right?"

"Oh, I don't know. I guess so. You'll have to settle that with Mr. Reynolds. But for money sake do anything necessary to get us moved in. I've waited here for four hours."

"We'll do our best, ma'am, but I'll take some time yet. And I don't want to hear any more of those Staten Island jokes."

Mrs. Reynolds went back for another inspection.

"It is pretty," she said, "but it's a little lonesome. If they would only hurry! And I do wish Bob could have got off. He's waited here since three o'clock and he's still here. I've waited here for four hours."

She had spent the hours of her long vigil planning a place for all their goods and chattels. She had an complete a picture of the ensemble as a stage manager has of his setting. That ought to expedite matters, she thought, when the furniture did come.

After what seemed another interminable wait she sighted an approaching wagon. It was an ordinary truckman's cart such as is used in construction work. It was piled high with barrels, tables, chairs and boxes in a jumble, anomalous mass that suggested many breaks and scratches.

"This is the best I could do, ma'am," called the driver, as he brought the load to a halt at the door. "There ain't a moving van within five miles and it'd be dark before we got one. But we'll get you in all right."

"Oh, do be careful, won't you?" she answered. "I wouldn't heap things so."

Startling feet of prestidigitator and the scowry moving men are wont to display when their task is nearing an end soon disposed of the load. The contents of the last wagon were disappearing when Reynolds arrived. He had had a hard day at the office and a tiresome trip on subway, ferry and trolley that seemed doubly long because of the suspense. But he bounded into the house like a schoolboy and, ignoring the presence of the movers, clasped his wife in his arms and implanted a resounding kiss.

"Hello, honey," he cried as he leaved her and stood surveying the room. "Isn't this great? A castle all our own!" Then—he looked at her—and a tired, dirty, but beautiful little queen. And she is just going to sit down and not stir another line until slaves have done her bidding and served her a royal repast of—

"Bologna and potato salad, my lord!"

"Don't you believe it. Look, Jane." He unwrapped a package hurriedly and disclosed a two-pound sirloin.

"That's good for tired muscles and this for tired nerves. Sparkling Burgundy fresh from a Staten Island brewery. We're going to have a regular house warming and I'm going to prepare it."

"Let's get everything in first, Bob. That's the last load. Did you see what they brought it in?"

"Yes, where's the van?"

"They couldn't get it up here. You'll have to settle with the men. They said there would be an extra charge for the wagon."

He went out to conclude negotiations. Presently he called her:

"Jane, come out and look over the estate. I bought some seeds and I'm going to start a garden tomorrow. And broiling steak and in a minute he called her.

"With a kitchen towel stuck under his collar and a face as red as a stocker's he held a chair for her and bade her to the board."

"There, how is that, my lady?" he asked proudly. "Could the Waldorf's famous Oscar do any better? Eat, drink and be—"

"Sleepy," she finished for him. "I just know I'm going to collapse right here when my hunger's satisfied, for Bob, I'm tired, and it's such a job to put up a bed."

"I'll fix that, honey. Never felt better in my life. Why, if I had a lantern I'd go out and start my garden after I got you tucked away."

They sat over the coffee talking and planning.

There was a knock at the door.

"Good Lord, who's that?" said Bob. "It's nearly nine o'clock!"

"I don't know, but if it's Dick or any of your friends I just know I'll insult them. Bob, I'm nearly dead."

"Sh-h," he answered. "I'll go."

"Good evening!" said a cheery, though rather high-pitched voice as he opened the door. "I saw you moving in and I thought I'd drop around to see if there was anything I could do for you."

It was Mrs. Collins from up at the next cottage. Bungalow, James called it when he came here, but that was two years ago.

"It's awfully kind of you to call," said Reynolds. "Things are in a terrible mess here, but you won't mind, I'm sure."

He offered her a chair. Mrs. Collins opened the door and looked in. Her appearance buttressed her assertion that she usually took things as they were.

She looked an easy-going, humor sort of good figure, but slightly pasty other service as to personal charms and comely adornment. Her skirt of black serge was tight fitting and rather modish in cut, but soiled in places. Her white shirt-waist was open at the collar and tucked under, revealing a throat full and round, but red. Her hands matched this color and were coarse in texture.

Her abundant hair was her chief attraction. It was done up in pompadour fashion, and floated wildly here and there like some intrepid amazon's. But it, too, despite the magnificence of its growth, could not escape the general tone of dowdiness that embraced the whole; for, in the greater part it was a light gold, but in intervening strands and at the roots it showed a darker hue. Her eyes were clear blue with dark brows and lashes. Her nature had been neither cheated nor spoiled.

Mrs. Collins' eyes, if all other clues were abandoned, pointed the way to past beauty; beauty not extant, but clouded, crossed by the lines of life; hard life; toilsome life. Mrs. Collins was forty-five and she looked her age. Granted luxury of servants, social pleasures, mental irresponsibilities and milk baths, she would have passed for thirty.

"Do you like it here?" asked Jane, who had now come forward and met her caller.

"Well, James likes it. Little old New York and a four-room flat was good enough for me but he wanted a bit of the country, and I put up with it for his sake. But, don't let me discourage you, dearie. She added quickly as she detected a slight waning of hope. "I brought something for you."

From a bulging pocket he drew out packages of seeds and bulbs.

"Flowers of all kinds, honey!—Jonquills, hyacinths, daffodils—"

"Why, foolish," she interrupted with a laugh. "They won't grow this year."

Then, as she saw his crestfallen look, "But never mind; did some bad man impose on my little city boy? I'll plant them and just make them grow. What are those? Nasturtiums, pansies, sweet peas—that's more like it, and I'm just crazy for a whole bed of salvia."

And so they talked and planned and selected the sites for the beds, and Jane, who was much better versed in such matters than her urban husband, told him what would have to be done with the soil, a barren, sandy formation that would scarcely nourish a sunflower.

He ran into the house for his garden seeds, a whole array of the suburban delights from yuccas to musk melons. He had enough for a small farm. By the time they had decided where the domain of practical husbandry should end and that of the flowers begin, it was dark.

"If the lord chancellor of my culinary house please, I'm hungry," she informed him. "Let's kill the fatted sirloin and make merry. If all those seeds of yours grow we'll have to turn vegetarians later, so we had better what our appetites on beef."

"All right," he told her as they reached the veranda. "You just sit here and when dinner's all ready I'll announce it."

But in a minute he had surrendered and was calling her.

"Where in the world are things, Jane? The kitchen, I mean. I mean. I've opened three boxes and I haven't struck anything but books and linen."

They found the needed box under two trunks and a pile of pictures. He got it open and led her back to the porch. He cleared the table and set it and then he was back to her again.

"The icebox is locked, Jane. Have you got the key?"

"Oh, Bob," she said in tones presaging real calamity, "there isn't a bit of bread."

"Never mind, I'll get some," he answered. "There's a store right down at the car line."

"But that's three blocks. Maybe one of the neighbors would help us out in an emergency."

"I'd rather not ask the first day. I'll only be a minute, Jane."

Soon after he returned she scented the welcome aroma of coffee and a broiling steak and in a minute he called her.

"With a kitchen towel stuck under his collar and a face as red as a stocker's he held a chair for her and bade her to the board."

"There, how is that, my lady?" he asked proudly. "Could the Waldorf's famous Oscar do any better? Eat, drink and be—"

"Sleepy," she finished for him. "I just know I'm going to collapse right here when my hunger's satisfied, for Bob, I'm tired, and it's such a job to put up a bed."

"We don't mind mosquitoes and bullfrogs, do we, honey? Let's clear away the dishes and then I'll rig up a place for welcome slumber. There is sure work here and tomorrow won't be a day of rest for us."

CHAPTER II.

Dick Brings a Hostage. In Staten Island it is spring. Nature beckons. Across the bay from old Manhattan come new hosts to taste agrarian joys. Bob is happy, James is in his glory. Seeds are sprouting in the garden. A bed of radishes have thrown up their green shoots, the first harbingers of the season. Pale sprigs of early lettuce are peeping out. Beneath the glass frames of the hotbeds Junco tomato plants are creeping upward. You can almost see them grow. Fine stalks supporting empty baskets mark the site of embryo beans, peas and kohlrabi, and here is a row of poles for the delicious lima beans.

Back in her wire prison the Plymouth Rock sings and cackles, and beside her another fuses and scratches for her brood of fluffy chicks. On the porch of the Reynolds' cottage a canary trills and warbles, answering the chirp of myriad sparrows. In the kitchen Jane sings down the clatter of the dishes. Music is in the air; life is in the blood. Even Mrs. Collins has ceased to grumble. It is spring!

The Reynolds' dinner is for three tonight. For the first time since their coming the new home is to receive an urban caller.

"Good old Dick," said Jane as she set his place at the table. "I do hope he won't disappoint us."

Her fear was groundless. Dick Meade would not disappoint her, for he was an atom in the great legion of the unattached; a bachelor and alone he had not formed the habit of declining invitations to dinner. Dick was a reporter on a morning newspaper in New York; a political reporter with a leaning toward socialism and a tendency toward drink.

Poor Dick, with a panacea for all earthly ills except his own; champion of the downtrodden, but one of them; an aspiring St. Patrick longing to drive out all the hydra-headed serpents of monopoly with a wand of words, a dreamer of dreams, but lovable, witty, and a staunch friend. He and Reynolds were almost opposite types and this very difference in their lives made them companionable. Dick, also, was not blind to the attractions of his friend's young wife. She was a charming hostess, he thought. The dulcet harmony he found in this home often lulled his own feverish philosophy, or, at least, upset it.

Jane heard them approaching now and hurried out to the veranda.

"Welcome, stranger," she said after she had escaped from Bob's embraces. "You have almost forsaken us."

Dick responded with a laugh and an obsequious bow. "Never, fair one; I have merely been conserving resources that I may pay toll to corporate interests en route. Thirty cents for the round trip, Jane. Enough for wicker furniture and two pilseners. Besides, I bring tribute to my island queen. See!"

He held up a paste-board box punctured here and there with sticks that he concealed. Jane took it from him.

"Something alive?" she cried as she tried to peer into one of the apertures. She ran into the house for scissors and returned, cut the string. Within there peered at her from two sleepy, light-bellied eyes, a fox terrier puppy, diminutive and dimly marked.

"Oh, you little dear!" Lifting the pup from the box, she pressed its soft fur to her cheeks. "I've just been crazy for a dog, Dick; and isn't it a beauty?"

She put it on the floor, stooped and called "Here, Dick, here, Dick! That's what we'll name him, won't we, Bob?"

"Honored beyond words," said the donor. "Why not Bob?"

"No; look at his eyes. They're blue just like yours, Dick, and he's so cunning!"

Meade bent down and patted the pup's head.

"Well, I'm glad she likes you, old top. Unless there's such a resemblance."

"You'd better feed him, Jane," Bob suggested. "I want Dick to see the garden so we'll prow around a while till dinner."

Reynolds' guest showed general enthusiasm over the progress of his friend's agricultural venture. For an amateur Reynolds had displayed skill and the best of his garden had been allotted to his garden comprised about a fourth of his half-acre lot. This had divided into little rectangular plots about thirty feet deep and fifteen wide. Narrow paths ran between so that each could be cultivated and watered without treading on the bed itself.

"You must have had some expert opinion here, Bob," Dick ventured. "I never saw a more orderly garden. Looks like you had laid it out with a gun and a square. Where did you get the idea?"

"Jane helped out a lot and then I studied government bulletins. They told me what to do for the soil. It wasn't much better than a lot of sawdust when we came, Dick. It was good for some things, but not for others. I looked all that up, and so there is different treatment of the ground in different beds; lime, potash, bone and plain fertilizer. That's modern-day farming, my boy; the way your depleted trusts would do things if they were trying to raise beans and cabbagees. You see, there is system for the little man as well as the capitalist. If he will only take advantage of it I'll bet you I've got twice as much out of that garden as my friend Collins does the street, and he's had two years' start of me."

"Great! I hope you do. But where in the world did you find the time for all the work you've put into this patch?"

"Got up with the sun and put in an hour before breakfast. The novelty of it all took the edge off the toil and I've really enjoyed it."

They heard Jane calling them to dinner and went in.

"Where is my namesake?" Dick inquired.

"Asleep in the kitchen. The little dear had nearly half a pint of milk and I guess he's done for the night."

"The evening, you mean," said Bob. "Just wait till his digestive organs have had a chance. He's got one of the cutest little soprano voices you ever heard and we're in for plenty of midnight solos till he becomes acclimated. I've raised pups before."

"So have I, Bob," the guest replied, "and one thing I know, you mustn't humor him. Pups and babies are just the same; if they cry, let them have it out. Better stay awake all night than stuff or smother them."

"Very well, Richard. Thanks for the lore, Dick. Jr., shall wait in peace, but I think the hen house would be far better for his lungs."

"Bob!" Jane exclaimed.

Dick waved his napkin aloft. "Truce, truce," he cried with a laugh, "or I shall blame myself for having brought trouble to Elysium. I will return the pup and bring you a turtle dove."

"You will not," said Jane quickly. "Dick is mine and you're wasting your time discussing him. He's going to be one of the family."

Her husband laughed and salaamed toward the kitchen door. "Dog, thy future is assured. The queen has spoken and great shall be thy power in the land."

"Amen," said Dick. "Twas ever thus."

Jane served coffee from a shining aluminum percolator, which she informed her husband and Dick was the culmination of heroic efforts to supply her with tobacco coupons.

"Isn't it a dandy?" she asked, "and it makes perfectly fine coffee in two minutes."

"And it's a godsend, Jane," Dick answered, "for now I may smoke real tobacco. For months I've battled with Mr. Lady Nicotine in her vilest forms to find brands that furnished the most green tickets. You know my sentiments concerning kings and princes, but I have quashed them and paid homage to the rulers of four thousand years, from the first Ramezes to the last George."

"Most noble sacrifice, my dear Dick, and please keep on. Look! I got a catalogue today. For only twelve thousand coupons I can get a piano and I need one badly."

"Holy smoke, deliver me! Bob must rent one."

"What do you think of the shack, Dick?" asked Reynolds, parrying. "Let's help Jane clear the table and then we'll take you on a tour of inspection."

The Reynolds' bungalow was one of those ingenious devices of a land company's art, pretty and glaring, but built to sell at a large profit. The exterior was attractive if not imposing. The lower half was stucco and the upper brown-stained shingles. The ex-tending mansard roof drooped low over the veranda and gave a snug, squat appearance to the whole. Within, it boasted no reception room or hall. The big living room ran the full breadth of the house, and served as a parlor, library and dining-room. On this the most pretentious efforts of the builder had been spent. On the side abutting the kitchen it had a stationary sideboard of mission effect. The entire wall was paneled half-way with a similar wood, a cheap set, stained in imitation of mission oak. Above the paneling on this end of the room was a narrow shelf meant to retain the usual array of slates or plates. Though not separated by door or arch, the attempt had been made to have this half conform to the requirements of a dining-room, leaving the other to serve as a library. The low windows were set with uniform simplicity; one on either side of the door and one at each end. In the living half of the room a window seat ran from door to wall, and a combination bookshelf and desk offset the buffet of the other side. This corner Jane had converted into a "comfy," home-like lounging place. Pillows of her own making were scattered plentifully along the window seat and piled high at the end against the wall. A little octor table laden with books, magazines and Bob's tobacco tray was in reach, and, beside it, a big Morris chair and Jane's smaller rocker. Here their evenings were spent in Bob's reading aloud while Jane sewed, or with occasional games of cribbage and pinochle.

Diversions were not plentiful and indeed there was little need of them. Bob's day in the city, his long trip home, the dinner, his hour with his garden and Jane's daily struggle with domestic duties left little energy for nocturnal pastime. An hour or two usually found them ready for the little room at the back, which, though dignified nominally as a guest's chamber, they had commandeered for sleeping purposes themselves. This room and the kitchen, with a bath between, divided the space in back of the long living room. Here the builder had recompensed himself for such extravaganzas as were indulged in in the front. The room was of barren simplicity; severe white walls, a window, closet, and door to the bathroom with woodwork of the cheapest spruce.

The only access to the second story was the stairway in the kitchen. There were two rooms there. A long one across the front of the house, but on account of the sloping roof, much narrower than the one below and with a lower ceiling. The other was above the guest chamber, while the space over the kitchen was left unfinished for storeroom purposes.

"Space galore," said Meade as he eyed those unadorned rooms. "You might take a boarder."

"Try us and see, Dick. I know one we would be glad to have, wouldn't we, Jane?" her husband answered.

"Certainly. Why don't you do it, Dick? Just think what a help you'd be, too."

"Sure. Little Tom Sawyer here would let me weed the garden and feed his hens and, maybe, if I were real good, you'd let me wash the dishes."

"Well, I'd consider it."

"I wouldn't like anything better, Jane, but you know a newspaper man keeps rather strenuous hours. Some times I'm through at midnight and sometimes at four in the morning. I'd have to make a swim of it if I waited to get across the bay at that hour. No, I guess I am doomed to the hall bedroom in Washington square."

"And the little place on the corner, Dick. Don't omit that; the place where they uncrown monarchs, divide Rockefeller's millions and drown all social ills in a flood of amber and foam. Honest, now, isn't that what you're thinking of as much as the swim across the bay? But, speaking of corners, we've got one ourselves. There's a little, fat German two blocks down the street who'd just love to talk Schopenhauer with you."

"No doubt I'll meet him, Bob. I'll need both philosophy and his merchandise as a brace for the return trip."

"You're not going back tonight, Dick," Jane announced. "Stay and go with Bob in the morning. Why, you'll miss half the fun of you don't have one of our commuters' breakfasts. Up with the birds, you know. Coffee and rolls at five-thirty and new-laid eggs—if there are any. That's the time when you get the true bucolic spirit."

A note of irony in her tone brought Bob with a start.

"No, little rebel," he exclaimed, "you don't have to get up at five-thirty and you know I could get that morning repeat in two minutes if you'd let me."

"But I won't. I'd feel fine lying in bed like some Fifth avenue beauty, with my husband puttering around with a frying pan and coffee pot. No, thank you. The day is long enough without you as it is."

Dick offered solace. "Bob isn't the only beneficiary, Jane. You know early rising is good for the complexion, and now I know the secret of yours."

She countered. "Positively, Dick, you're getting bearable. If I had to choose another husband I wouldn't scratch socialist off my eligible list at all. If there's only one egg in the morning you shall have it."

"Is that a likely contingency?"

"Ask Bob. We've been drawing lots for it for the past week. It's the season when the maternal instinct predominates the sense of domestic duty in the henery. Of course there are store eggs to piece out with, but they don't count."

They went downstairs and Jane took up her embroidery while the men tempted fortune at auction pinochle with a third hand dead.

"That's my favorite game," Bob told Dick

BULL DURHAM

When the Famous Tobacco Comes From and How It is Gathered.

Durham, North Carolina, is the heart of the "bright" tobacco district, from which the world receives its supply of leaf for ready-made cigarettes and for genuine "Bull" Durham smoking tobacco, used by smokers who roll their own cigarettes.

An army of men is employed all the year round in procuring this choice leaf for "Bull" Durham. They visit the farmers; inspect the leaf as it grows and is cured; buy it direct from the farmers or at the daily auctions in the leaf warehouses during the season. More than 30,000,000 pounds of the best tobacco grown is handled annually by the "Bull" Durham factory. Not a pound of any but the most carefully selected Virginia-North Carolina "bright" tobacco ever enters the factory. Moreover, only 15 per cent of the selected tobacco purchased is actually used in "Bull" Durham. The remaining 25 per cent is not considered good enough for this great brand.

WRIGHT-METZLER JULY CLEARANCE SALE

Is The Talk of The Town

Every other store here is proof itself that none can match Wright-Metzler goods or prices.

Some have not the patronage that warrants a quick outlet for big quantities of goods bought to sell at a saving over usual prices.

Some must buy round-about, paying more for a thing than the price at the source of supply.

Some buy poor-quality goods hoping to build a growing business on a shaky foundation.

Some entice the people into their stores with false advertising, tricky window displays and other means that may bait a shopper once—but never again.

Some let their stocks go to seed and never have the particular thing a person wants in season.

Some tie a can onto perfectly good trade by refusing reasonable requests for exchange—or money back—when a patron, once in a year, thinks he's bought a needless thing.

Some stores have too many prices on one piece of merchandise. The sliding scale is a suspicion-breeding method, because we hate to think a neighbor probably paid less than the price quoted us.

With the coming of Wright-Metzler's, store-keeping improved.
